1.4 Review of Related Study

1.4.1 Previous Study

I Was Here actually has been analyzed and discussed in some different perspectives from researches and reviewers. The first research is done by Aldeana Roefmelinda from Diponegoro University (2016). Her research is entitled “Book Review of Gayle Forman’s I Was Here”. In her review, she also analyzes about the strengths of the novel in major and minor theme, the strong character, the cover, and natural sex scene. The other review is written by Alex Townsend in Disability in Kidlit web, I Was Here by Gayle Forman is a complicated book. It’s also one that should be completely plastered with trigger warnings for suicide, encouragement of suicide, and romanticizing of suicide. She thinks that I Was Here is a book with a lot of potentials that fall flat in the worst ways.

Germ Magazine also said that I Was Here does a good job of incorporating problems into the storyline today. There is talk of online chats in forum and confronting the demons of both a friend and themselves. Technology plays an important role in the story, and, more importantly, shows how technology can be used to influence people, for good and bad. I Was Here is a great book that admirably handles the topics of death, suicide, and how today world of technology is plays its own part in them.

In this research, the writer will analyze the same novel with a different theory. She uses Psychological theory to analyze the symptoms and the causes of depression pictured in this novel.
1.4.2 Theoretical Framework

In this study, the writer uses Psychological approach as a theory to find the depression symptoms of the main characters and also the causing factors of the main character’s depression in literary work. According to National Institute Of Mental Health in Depression.

Depression is everyone occasionally feels blue or sad, but these feelings are usually fleeting and pass within a couple of days. When a person has a depressive disorder, it interferes with daily life, normal functioning, and causes pain for both the person with the disorder and those who care about him or her. Depression is a common but serious illness, and most who experience it need treatment to get better. (2)

Usually, people who get depression will show signs or symptoms if they get depression. According to National Institute Of Mental Health in Depression, the depression symptoms can include:

1. Anxious or “empty” feelings
2. Feelings of hopelessness and/or pessimism
3. Feelings of guilt, worthlessness and/or helplessness
4. Irritability, restlessness
5. Loss of interest in activities or hobbies once pleasurable, including sex
6. Fatigue and decreased energy
7. Difficulty concentrating, remembering details and making decisions
7. Insomnia, early-morning wakefulness, or oversleeping

8. Overeating, or appetite loss

9. Thoughts of suicide, suicide attempts

10. Persistent aches or pains, headaches, cramps or digestive problems that do not ease even with treatment. (4)

Not everyone who is depressed experiences every symptom. Some people experience only a few symptoms while others may experience many. Like in this novel, the writer finds four symptoms of depression which the main character has, such as feeling hopelessness, decreased energy, oversleeping, and thoughts of death or suicide, or suicide attempts.

In addition to symptoms, depression must have a cause that makes the symptoms come. According to Gabbey in Health line article “Causes of Depression” that have the similar definition of depression with National Institute Of Mental Health, the causes of depression can include:

1. Genetic

   Depression may be an inherited condition. Someone may have a higher likelihood of experiencing a depressive disorder at some point in their life if someone have a family member with depression. The exact genes involved are not known. It’s believed that many genes may play a factor in causing depression.

2. Biochemical

   Some people have noticeable changes in their brains with depression. Even though this potential cause is not understood, it does suggest depression starts with brain function. Some psychiatrists look at brain chemistry with cases of depression.

Neurotransmitters in the brain – specifically serotonin, dopamine, or neorephinephrine – affect feelings of happiness and pleasure and may be out of balance in people with depression. Antidepressants work to balance these neurotransmitters, mainly serotonin. How and why these neurotransmitters get out of balance and what role they play in depressive states is not fully understood.

3. Hormonal

Changes in hormone production or functioning could lead to the onset of depressive states. Any changes in hormone states – including menopause, childbirth, thyroid problems, or other disorders – could cause depression. With postpartum depression, mothers develop symptoms of depression after giving birth. It is normal to be emotional because of the changing hormones, but postpartum depression is a serious condition.

4. Seasonal

As daylight hours get shorter in the winter, many people develop feelings of lethargy, tiredness, and a loss of interest in everyday activities. This condition was called seasonal affective disorder (SAD). Now it is known as major depressive disorder with seasonal pattern. Their doctor may prescribe medication or a light box to help treat this condition. The condition also usually goes away once the days get longer.
5. Situational

Trauma, a big change, or struggle in life can trigger a case of depression. Losing a loved one, being fired, having financial troubles, or undergoing a serious change can have a big impact on people.

Depression is not a simple condition with a known cause. Some people are more susceptible to depressive episodes while others are not. In this novel, the writer also found the causes of depression on the main character, such as Genetic causes that inherited by her mom, and then the Situational causes in the form of trauma.

1.5 Method of Research

In analyzed this study, the writer uses the close reading technique. “Close reading technique is form of writing, discussion or silent observation. It should be based on questioning the text. Close reading requires that you take the text seriously enough to study it, to read and read it. Search for detail that might otherwise go unobserved, examine the text special words and term refer to the dictionary to be sure of the meaning necessary” (Jacobus : 6). According to Jacobus, the method is that the researcher notes the elements specific uses of language, such imaginary, symbols, repeated terms, patterns of expression, the tone of the speaker, and the main ideas the writer introduces.

The writer collects the information by reading the novel carefully and intensively to get a good understanding about the story. While reading the novel, the writer mark the data related about the symptoms and the causes of depression of the main character. The writer also support the analysis with reading and searching the sources, some articles or anything that makes the writer be understands about the story. The writer collected the data and make important point to make research question. Then the writer analysis the data that related to the theory. In the end, the writer makes the conclusion as the result of the analysis.
