CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of the Research

Comedy combines diction, style, characterization and other stylistic elements. According to Johnson (1989: 15), laughter may counteract a desired comedic effect rather than actually helping to achieve it. Comedy presents characters, settings, and ideas in an absurd way in order to amuse, instruct, and entertain the audience. When tragedy is present, comedy is frequently described as a moral satire that seeks to highlight vices like avarice, hypocrisy, lust, laziness, or hubris. Coper (2015: 25) argues that jokes with "respectable" humor mock people who are less than or "degrade them." Comedy should denote a type of enjoyment that manifests physically in laughing or a smile, both in real life and in drama. The comedy of humors, developed by Jonson (1989: 4), is predicated on the idea that a person's temperament or character is determined by the humor that predominates among the four.

According to Danandjaja (1999: 10), erotic comedy and social protest both provide consolation in the community. This is because laughter can release stress that is internalized about the interests of the community norm. Humor-induced laughter can preserve social harmony and the delicate balance of life.

Because stand-up comedy offers a comedy that everyone can enjoy and laugh at, it has become a popular television program for both young and old people. According to Coper (2015: 30), stand-up comedy is a genre of humor in which a comedian performs in front of a live audience and typically addresses them directly. The rise of stand-up comedy at this period demonstrated the development of the genre as an intriguing comedy. In comedy laughter that emphasizes the offender's skill and cleverness. One benefit of stand-up comedy is that sarcastic expression is used frequently in all comic performances. According to Test (1991: 8), Satire is a literary genre that alludes to a specific person or circumstance.

Based on the justification provided, the researcher is curious to watch stand-up comedy of Gabriel Iglesias. This study only focuses on Gabriel Iglesias special show at Bay Arena San Fransisco, California. In the Special show Gabriel tells about his experience in his world tour to India. Stand up comedy is interesting show, many people like stand up comedy because it can make people laugh and there are lots of massages. Therefore, the researcher interesting to see the satire used by Gabriel Iglesias at the special show at Bay Arena and The Tittle is Gabriel Goes to India.

1. To find out the types of Satire in Gabriel iglesias stand up comedy on Youtube
2. To find out the purpose of satire in Gabriel Iglesias stand up comedy on Youtube

1.5 Significance of the Research

Satire has a special abillity to challenge public discourse and make leaders look foolish so they will modify their policies.
