

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

In this chapter the researcher concludes all the things that have been discussed in this research, and the writer provides some suggestions based on related topics for future research.

5.1 Conclusion

After the writer analyzed the data by referring to the theory from Perrine (1974) which states that there are many types of figurative language contained in the song including metaphor, simile, synecdoche, metonymy, hyperbole, personification, paradox, irony, symbolism, and understatement. Based on the results of the analysis, it shows that of the 10 songs in the album Future Nostalgia: The Moonlight, entitled: Break My Heart, Pretty Please, Boys Will Be Boys, Cool, Don't Start Now, Good In Bed, Physical, Love Again, Future Nostalgia, and Hallucinate. The writer found that there were 50 figurative language data. They include 9 metaphor, 1 simile, 5 synecdoche, 8 metonymy, 11 hyperbole, 4 personification, 4 paradox, 3 irony, 1 symbols, and 4 understatement. The most widely used figurative language is hyperbole 11 data, second is metaphor, third is metonymy, fourth is synecdoche, fifth is paradox and personification 4 data, irony 3 data, and the least used figurative language is symbolism and simile 1 data.

Based on the results of the findings and discussion data found the writer finds that there are connotative meanings used in every song lyric from the album Future Nostalgia: The Moonlight by Dua Lipa. The writer uses the theory of meaning from Geoffrey N Leech (Leech, 1981) to interpret the meaning of each figurative language used.
