CHAPTER V

5. CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter contains the conclusion about the data that have been analyze in previous chapter and the writer also put some suggestion in this chapter that would help the next researcher who doing research using the same theory or same source of the data

Conclusion

According to the research that already been done the writer can find that the classification of grammatical cohesion form especially in reference types, the writer found that there are three types of grammatical cohesion that the writer cites from the experts there are personal reference, demonstrative reference, and comparative reference, from all of these three the writer can classify that all of this kind of type reference are uttered in the source of the data and after classify the data and make a list of the data the writer can assume that the most used type of reference is personal reference which acknowledge the writer about the way people personally reference their own self. All of the data are explaining about reference but each type of reference are different the causes each types of reference different because of the way it is use the user or the reference, how people reference something such as location, or a place, they usually use demonstrative reference which can acknowledge the hearer about the location what element are involved in the reference that used by the user, in the other hand comparative reference are the less used in the data the writer only found 11 data that uttered about comparative reference which can be assume that from the data that have been analyze there comparative reference can be used to refers something but in comparative form, such as comparing a dead body to a stone it is used comparative reference because the stone is refers to dead body but the body got compared to the stone.

Suggestion

From the data that already been analyze the writer can give some suggestion for the next researcher who want to research about grammatical cohesion who want to focus about reference type, the writer suggest that the next researcher to understand the concept about grammatical cohesion and focused on reference type, the next researcher should understand that three of the types are different and it is indeed to be be care full to analyze the data because sometimes the reference each types have similarity or have more than one reference types that being used so the writer suggest that to read the data carefully and understand the theory better.

For the next researcher the writer suggest that if willing to do the same research the writer also have some suggestion about the source of the data which can be analyze using the same theory that the writer used, there are many movies, short story or like transcript on the speech, such as Barack Obama speech, toy story franchise transcript. The main point that the next researcher need to understand is the point of view of the users of the reference because the reference type need to be understand when the time it is used where it is refers to the next researcher hold acknowledge this to gain and earn better data and to get the best result on the research.
