CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

This chapter contains the conclusion and suggestion about the research which already been done by the writer, and is based on the result in the previous chapter. In this chapter, the writer also suggests the next researcher who wants to research the same topics and field in pragmatics.

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the research that has been done, the authors found five classifications of speech acts, namely, representative speech acts, expressive speech acts, directive speech acts, commissive speech acts, and declarative speech acts, all of these types are used by characters in the data source. For example, the various words that parents use to ask or forbid their children. It reflects the words used depending on who the speaker is speaking to. It would be different if the characters spoke to children and adults. So, for further research, this speech act can be studied in other speeches in various contexts to find various types of speech acts and their functions that reflect the principle of politeness in the speech used. Furthermore, as a result of the data, it can be concluded that expressive and representative speech acts are the most widely used in this data source because the authors analyze the data, directive, Commissive, and declarative speech acts are rarely used in the data source. To find the function that is used by the character in the source of the data the writer read the data carefully, and the writer found that this function is used by the characters in the source of the data.

To find the function used by the American candidate in his concession speech, the writer reads the data again carefully, and finds that there are several functions in the data source,

5.2 Suggestion

From the findings in the previous chapter that the writer also found some of the suggestions for the next researcher who wants to do some research in the same field especially in the speech act of directive or in the speech act field. It is better for the next researcher to acknowledge the theory about speech act because there are many types each speech act such as speech act of directive there are five types of this speech act, which each of the types has different ways to analyze and have different meaning, the writer also suggests that the next writer to choosing the source of the data that relevant to the theory which contains the speech act of directive which will help the next researcher in obtaining data.
