The topic has received much attention from both practitioners and academia over the years. The paper attempted to evaluate the proposed corporate productivity program with two surveys, i.e. SME survey and industry survey. However, overall, authors failed to describe simply, clearly and satisfactorily how the approach can help. Reviewer highlighted several concerns as follows: 1. The manuscripts contain numerous grammar and word usage errors. E.g. page 17,18, 19, etc Page 17 "The 50 Phase 2 survey responses that completed ..." Page 18 "Thus, a positive relationship indicates the program supports the primary ..." Page 18 "displays the specific productivity practices' results" (incomplete sentence) Page 19 "These systemic productivity improvements have the potential to reduce ..." 2. Also, many capital letters in the sentence that shouldn't be there obstructing the clarity of messages. E.g in page 1, , 8, 9, 10, 11, 17, etc 3. Statement of objective the study in Abstract and Point of Departure and Research
